

Features

Like our popular Appalachia, High Desert is a gorgeous solid hickory with the same green story as Appalachia and Las Cruces. High Desert is wire-brushed rather than scraped, which gives a gently textured appeal. It also has a lower gloss level, creating a nice matte finish that highlights the wire brushing.

Another similarity to Appalachia is that the composite structure of the floor creates lines or a butcher-block appearance. The wire brushing makes this characteristic even more visible than in the scraped version, which tends to mask it more. In addition, High Desert's brushed beveled ends may appear chiseled or time worn, adding to the beauty and uniqueness of this hardwood floor.
